(Maybe those
campaign
contributions
from Big Tobacco
had something to do with it.)

The tobacco industry gave money to Robert Flanders both before and after he voted against smoke-free legislation.

Why did Robert Flanders vote against legislation that would have protected New Hampshire residents from the dangers of secondhand smoke?

He didn't do it to keep us healthy.

But Flanders did receive money from Big Tobacco—both before the bill came to the Senate floor, and after he delivered his vote against it.

If Robert Flanders is going to work for Big Tobacco, he shouldn't be doing it from the State Senate.
